

Letters Home From Two Young Missionaries

A Touching and Inspiring True Story

In the summer of 2016, two young women from a small town in the Midwest left their comfortable lives behind to serve as missionaries in a remote village in Africa. They were both recent college graduates, and they had never been out of the country before. But they were both passionate about their faith, and they were eager to make a difference in the world.

The two missionaries, Sarah and Emily, spent the next two years living and working in the village. They taught English at the local school, they helped to build a new clinic, and they provided support to the local community. They also faced many challenges along the way, including language barriers, cultural differences, and the constant threat of illness. But through it all, they never lost their faith or their commitment to their mission.
