A sweeping history of the human species

The Human Age is a sweeping history of the human species, from our origins in Africa to our current global civilization. Christian draws on a wide range of sources, including archaeology, anthropology, history, and environmental science, to tell the story of how humans have shaped the planet and how the planet has shaped us.

Christian argues that the human species is a unique force in nature. We are the only species that has the ability to alter our environment on a global scale. We have used this power to create great civilizations and to improve our quality of life. But we have also used our power to damage the planet, causing climate change, pollution, and other environmental problems.

A call to action

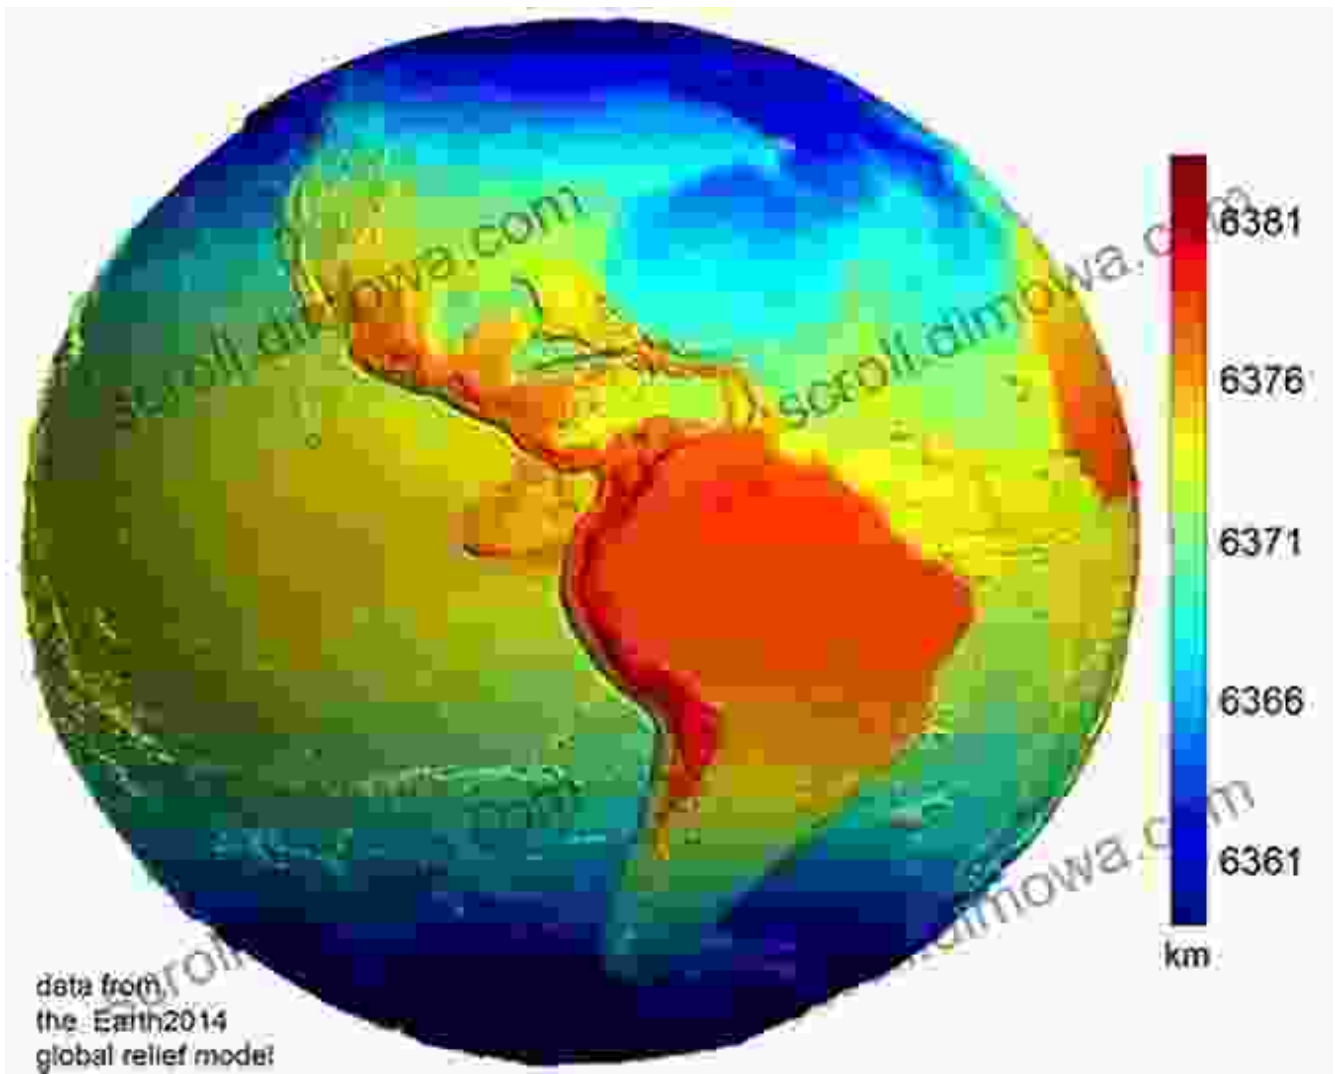

The Human Age is a timely and important book. It is a reminder that we are all part of a long and complex history, and that we have a responsibility to protect the planet for future generations.

Christian calls on us to change our ways and to create a more sustainable future. He argues that we need to reduce our consumption, invest in renewable energy, and protect our forests and oceans.
